This passage is about homework.

For most of the 1990s, when teachers wanted to improve test scores and grades, because the American educational system wasn't working, they assigned more homework.

But now, some educators think homework has gone too far. Even six-year-old students get homework. In some schools in California, primary school students do an average of two hours a week. In other primary schools, children do as many as 45 to 90 minutes of homework a day. High school students do anywhere from nine hours a week to three and four hours every day.

Educators disagree on homework. There are two main issues they disagree on. The first issue is whether or not homework actually improves your studies. The second issue is whether or not homework is fair.

Does homework help? For years, educators have tried to prove that homework helps. But it's hard to prove. In 1985, a professor named Herbert Walberg conducted a research study on homework. He concluded that "homework boosts achievement dramatically, especially if teachers grade or comment on it." However, other educators say that Walberg's studies only show a tiny boost, a minimal gain, which doesn't really prove anything.

In Half Moon Bay, students take a standardized, national test used for college admission, called the SAT. Scores for the SATs are on a scale of 0 to 800. In the past five years, the average score has gone from 439 to 467. It's an increase, but not a very big one. No-one can say for sure that homework made that happen.

51. What do educators think about homework?
- They believe it improves studies.
 - They think it wouldn't be fair not to have it.
 - They have proved that homework helps.
 - They can't agree as to whether or not it is beneficial.
52. Why are SAT scores important?
- They are a national test.
 - They are dependent on homework.
 - They are needed to get into university.
 - They prove that homework is a necessary evil.
53. What does the passage claim about American education?
- It produces highly educated people.
 - Teachers must be better trained.
 - It has improved since the 1990's.
 - It needs improvement.
54. How much homework do high school students get?
- Not quite enough.
 - 1 1/2 hours per day
 - maximum four hours a day
 - four hours a week
55. What is the main idea of the passage?
- Homework may not be as important as some people think.
 - Educators are not competent.
 - Homework should be given right from elementary school.
 - Homework gets students to university.

Writing Section Instructions 30-minute time limit

Read a short article from a local newspaper about no more 18-year-old drivers.

NO MORE 18 YEAR OLD DRIVERS

Because of the increasing numbers of drunken driving among young people, the Ministry of Transportation has decided to raise the age when people can get a driver's license from 18 to 21. Authorities feel that at 18 young people are not responsible enough to understand the dangers of drinking and driving.

This measure has met with strong opposition from many parents, young people and driving school owners who feel the government is taking away a large percentage of their customers.

Task 1: Letter

You have just turned 18 and you were on the point of taking driving lessons. Now, it looks like you have to wait for another 3 years. Write a letter to the Ministry of Transportation giving your views on their new law.

Task 2: Essay

In some states or countries one can get a driving license at the age of 16, in others it is 18, and in still others, it's at the age of 21. What do you think the legal age should be? Discuss your opinion and give reasons and examples to support your views.

When you have selected your task, remember to fill in "letter" or "essay" in the ECCE Writing Response box in the front of your writing answer document.

BRAINSTORMING 1

- if driving drunk remove license for 1 year
- take test again
- drive without license - remove for 5 years

BRAINSTORMING 2

- best at 18 - the average
- 16 too young - 21 is too old
- maturity and age aren't the same thing

1: MODEL LETTER

Dear Sirs,

I cannot find the words to express my disappointment and make you understand how I am feeling.

My 18th birthday was something I had been looking forward to since I was a child because my parents had promised me a car, if I had good grades while I was in the lyceum. From the age of 12, I had started saving from my allowance money, to pay for my driving lessons myself.

I find your new law, which raised the age for getting your driver's license, totally unfair. By doing this, you punish every young person in the country and not the wrongdoers. Because some irresponsible teen-agers drive while drunk, does not mean that all young people must be punished. What could be done in the situation where a young person is found driving drunk, is that his license can be taken away for 1 full year and this person must go through lessons and his driving test all over again, to get it back, once the year is up. If such a person is caught driving without a license, he should be thrown in jail and not be allowed a license for five more years.

I really do not believe that the three years of age between 18 - 21 will cure the problem of young drunken drivers so, why punish all of us, because of a reckless, irresponsible minority?

Please give my letter some thought and try to find a fairer solution to the problem.

2. MODEL ESSAY

I really must be fair and say that even though I'm in my early teens, I think sixteen is too young to have the responsibility of driving a car. I think the best age is the 18 year age limit. At that age kids are graduating from the lyceum and entering the adult world. This is the right time to learn to drive and gain some freedom and independence, in movement as well.

By the time most people are twenty one years of age, they either have a full time job or are almost graduating from university. Most people are quite mature by this time and I feel it is rather late for them to get a driver's license. But, in all fairness, there is one matter which I feel I must bring up. Maturity does not necessarily go hand in hand with age. I have met 30 year olds who were immature and will probably never grow up judging from their attitudes, and, 16 year olds who had the sophistication and wisdom of 50 year olds.

But, since this is not the general rule, I think it would be safe to say that for me, the ideal age to get your license is at 18.
